CALL FOR SESSION PROPOSALS OPEN FOR 2016 NATIONAL STUDENT ELECTRONIC MEDIA CONVENTION IN PHILADELPHIA

(April 22, 2016) — CBI is now accepting session proposals for the annual National Student Electronic Media Convention, to be held Oct. 20-22 at the Sonesta Philadelphia Hotel.

The convention will bring students, professionals, advisers and staff from college and high school electronic media outlets across the country for three days of educational sessions, exhibitions and special programs on all aspects of student broadcasting. Past session topics have covered a wide variety of topics, including FCC regulations, webcasting, legal issues, management and leadership, social media and more. The conference also includes the annual National Student Production Awards to honor the best work in television and radio production from students across the country.

“The National Student Electronic Media Convention has quickly earned a reputation as the top conference of its kind,” said CBI President Greg Weston. “That’s largely due to the incredible group of students, advisers, industry professionals and others who have taken the time to share their expertise with the next generation of electronic media pros. CBI welcomes session proposals with anyone interested in educating and informing our student attendees in topics such as broadcasting, promotions, sales and marketing, leadership, engineering and any other areas that will help them improve their student media outlets and prepare them for their careers.”

Media professionals, students, advisers, engineers, those working in media and legal professionals are invited to submit proposals, and preference is given to proposals with more than one speaker. Sessions proposals are being accepted now through Aug. 1, 2016 online at <http://www.askcbi.org/philadelphia/info-for-speakers/session-proposals/>.
