

Join CBI in St. Louis for the National Student Electronic Media Convention Visual Media Festival Entries Due Oct. 1, Early-Bird Registration Ends Oct. 1

Make plans to attend the 2019 National Student Electronic Media Convention (NSEMC) at the Hyatt Regency St. Louis at The Arch, Oct. 31-Nov. 2.

Early-bird registration rates end Oct. 1. CBI member students, faculty and staff can register for $110 per person.

After Oct. 1, convention rates start at $140 per person. View all registration rates at AskCBI.org.

Don't miss out on the Oct. 1 deadline for the CBI Visual Media Festival. The festival recognizes and exhibits student work in the areas of film and video production.

National Student Production Awards winners will be announced during the St. Louis convention. The National Student Production Awards are the country's most prestigious awards for student electronic media work.

More than 900 student-produced awards entries are professionally judged each year. There are over 30 award categories, including Best Newscast, Play-By-Play, Documentary, Student Media Website and Station Imaging. This year's awards include the addition of high school categories.

CBI is also seeking convention sponsors and exhibitors for this year's convention. Contact Development Director Lynn Riggle at Development@AskCBI.org before Oct. 11 for more information.

Registration, awards and hotel links are available at AskCBI.org/StLouis.

Download the free Attendify app and search for "CBI". Join the St. Louis event to view the session schedule, speaker biographies and vendor information.

Sharpen Skills During Wednesday's NSEMC Pre-Convention Workshops

CBI is hosting two pre-convention workshops Wednesday, Oct. 30. Sign up for these in-depth programs for a deep dive into a specific topic and add a new skill to your media toolbox. Register now for these two pre-convention workshops through the convention registration page. Act quickly! Both sessions have limited seating.

Ultimate Podcast Bootcamp | Podcast Workshop 9 a.m.-4 p.m. • $50

Sarah Hutchins, Editorial Director for Investigative Reporters & Editors and podcast host

Learn everything you need to know to produce a standout podcast. Turn your idea into a podcast your entire campus wants to subscribe to. We'll discuss the equipment and tools you need to get your show online and in front of an audience.

Then we'll dig deeper and talk about techniques to make your podcast stand out from the crowd. Topics will include storyboarding your podcast, conducting quality interviews and promoting your show. This bootcamp will provide resources for all kinds of podcasts: news, music-based, sports, drama and more.

Small Camera, Simple Stories | Mobile Storytelling Workshop 1-5 p.m. • $50

Leni Cooper and Lynn Riggle, University of Mount Union

This workshop is for the video noob. You'll learn some simple tips and tricks for producing better multimedia stories with just your smart device. We'll start with some basics including different narrative storytelling types, interviewing, shot composition, sequencing and compressing time. Following this workshop, you will go out and tell a story (one of your own ideas, or a suggested assignment).

Instructors will be available for feedback and troubleshooting before you upload your story to YouTube. Your work will be showcased during CBI's Show and Tell Saturday session. After the workshop, you should be able to take what you learn and start producing stories for your campus media to augment your social presence, or upload to your school's news site.

Attendees should bring their smart device with either iMovie for iOS or FilmoraGo for Android devices already installed. You should also have space for saving story elements on your device, so be sure to download and save your photos and videos.

Congratulations to the National Student Production Awards Finalists
